NEIL WILDGUST

Neil Wildgust has worked as a geoscientist for over 35 years, including early stints as a geologist in the UK minerals industry and then as a hydrogeologist in contaminated land and landfill assessment. He started working on CCS with the IEA Greenhouse Gas R&D Programme in 2008, and subsequently moved to Canada in 2011 to manage the IEAGHG Weyburn-Midale Program at the Petroleum Technology Research Centre in Regina. He represented the Global CCS Institute in Calgary between 2014 and 2016, before then working on CCS projects for the Energy & Environmental Research Center in North Dakota from 2016 to 2020 and the BC Geological Survey from 2020 to 2022. He also served as an Associate Editor of the International Journal of Greenhouse Gas Control between 2016 and 2021. Neil is currently working as an independent CCS consultant and holds a Masters' degree in Applied Environmental Geology from the University of Cardiff.
