

Sally Pehrsson

Sally Pehrsson works with the Geological Survey of Canada studying the Canadian Shield and younger regions, particularly the North. She is co-Editor-in-Chief of the Canadian Journal of Earth Sciences and an adjunct professor at University of Saskatchewan working on the evolution of tectonics through time. Her love of whisky comes from starry nights on a dock with her dad.

