Dr. Yannick Le Moigne

Dr. Yannick Le Moigne became a Research Scientist with Geological Survey of Canada - Pacific since January 2023. He received his PhD degree from the Simon Fraser University in 2020, following by being a postdoctoral researcher at the same university. Yannick is a volcanologist specialised in physical volcanology and geochemistry of volcanic systems. During his doctoral research, he focused on the understanding of Canada's deadliest volcanic eruption using a multidisciplinary approach (physical volcanology, geochemistry, and numerical modelling). His post-doctoral research helps unravel the history and eruptive behaviour of a range of extinct, dormant, and active volcanic systems in Western Canada via field mapping, geochemical and rheological investigations.
